Job Description

The Department of Supply Chain and Information Systems in the College of Business at Iowa State University welcomes applications for a tenure-track Associate Professor or Full Professor with the possibility of an endowed chair position in Supply Chain Management to begin Fall Semester 2015. This is a new position in the SCM program with an undergraduate major of approximately 200+ students that generates roughly 100 graduates annually. The SCM faculty consists of twelve tenured, tenure-track or professionally qualified faculty members. Primary responsibilities include both research and teaching in supply chain management at the undergraduate, Masters, and Ph.D. levels.

Successful applicants will be expected to maintain an outstanding research program and to assume a leadership role helping to outline the future path for this growing program. Reduced teaching responsibilities may be available for this position in conjunction with other leadership responsibilities. Successful applicants will participate significantly in program outreach efforts to expand relationships with supply chain companies and professional organizations. The ability to communicate effectively with prospective and current students, industry personnel, and the wider community is essential to this position.

Iowa State University is a research land-grant university with an enrollment of over 34,000 students and is a member of the prestigious Association of American Universities (AAU). We are located in Ames, Iowa, a community of approximately 52,000 people, about 35 miles north of Des Moines, the state capital.

The College of Business is accredited by AACSB International and is the third largest college at the University with an enrollment of approximately 3,600 undergraduate and 200 graduate students. The College of Business offers Bachelor’s, Master’s, and Ph.D. degrees in various disciplines, including Supply Chain Management. For more information about the College of Business and its programs, please visit our website at http://www.business.iastate.edu.

All faculty members are expected to exhibit and convey good citizenship within the program, the department, college, and university activities and collegial interactions, and maintain the highest standards of integrity and ethics.

Required Qualifications

- Applicants must have an earned doctorate in business administration or management with a concentration in logistics, marketing channels, operations, procurement, supply chain management, transportation, or a related field.
- A scholarly research record as evidenced by publications in top-tier journals.

The successful candidate must meet the university standards for appointment to the rank, including publications in premier journals in supply chain management or related fields and demonstrated ability as a successful classroom teacher.

In addition to the above, applicants for Full Professor must also have a strong national and international scholarly reputation.
Preferred Qualifications

- Very strong supply chain oriented research record evidenced by publications in leading academic journals.
- Work experience with responsibilities related to operations management, logistics, or supply chain management.
- Sustained record of excellence in teaching and the ability to teach a variety of SCM courses; including a variety of logistics and operations management classes at undergraduate, Masters, and Ph.D. levels; and experience supervising and placing graduate students.
- Demonstrated skill in developing and expanding relationships with supply chain companies and professional organizations.

Salary

Competitive and commensurate with qualifications

Special Conditions

All offers of employment, oral and written, are contingent upon the university’s verification of credentials and other information required by federal and state law, ISU policies/procedures, and may include the completion of a background check.
